Why Pursue A Dual Degree?

You are likely considering a further degree in business administration, but we recommend you do not one but two – faster and cheaper. The MBA is the world's most popular higher education degree; it provides a wide range of skills across key areas of business and management. Annually, there are 250,000 MBA graduates globally. While the benefits of an MBA are noticeable, the benefits of a dual MBA + DBA are exponential. The DBA is the highest degree in the business administration field that focuses on developing excellence in a field of choice and provides the learner the title of “Dr.” While individually, both degrees are important and can help accelerate professional growth – by pursuing the dual degree, the benefits are exponentially greater.

The dual degree program allows you to achieve both the MBA and DBA in a fraction of the time and cost it would take to pursue the programs individually. One gets not only the broad learnings of the MBA but also the more specialized skill set provided by the DBA, which can be used in senior leadership positions, academia, or to position oneself as a category expert. Most importantly – the dual degree makes you unique in a growing competitive corporate space, the holder of the powerful MBA + DBA combination is able to differentiate you from others and add value across projects and ventures.
